Tonight's Performance . . .

will take you on an adventure-filled class field trip with a group of school kids. They make friends with a city-slick toughie on the subway, get lost amidst a sea of yuppies in the downtown district, and live out a fantasy game of basketball with street hoop players. At the museum, where paintings and statues come to life, their adventures continue. Separated from their teacher, the field trip kids, must work as a team to fight off the haunting museum spirits. Back at school, the other kids marvel at these experiences and join the field trip kids in a celebration of their day.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM.....

CityStep is a unique program which combines the arts with community outreach. Twice a week, Harvard students teach theater and dance to fifth and sixth graders in classes which emphasize teamwork, concentration, and dedication. Every Saturday, especially enthusiastic children from last year's program come to the Harvard campus for their own more advanced rehearsals.

The dances and classes revolve around urban themes the children face every day, such as peer pressure, relationship conflicts, and meeting strangers.

The contact with skilled undergraduates has provided the participants with valuable role models. The undergraduates are from varied backgrounds, which enables them to communicate and respond to the children's different needs and problems. CityStep offers children the chance to develop self confidence, discipline and artistic expression through dance theater.

Artists from around the school join forces for the completely original CityStep performance: musicians, choreographers, dancers, designers and photographers. Citystep is not only a medium of expression and enrichment for the children, but for the teachers and undergraduates as well.

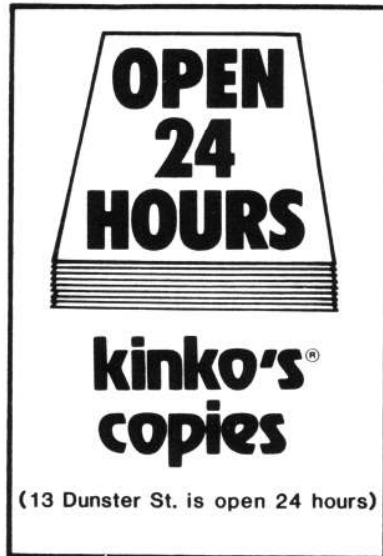

This year we lost our founding director, Sabrina T. Peck. As this evening's performance demonstrates, with a new structure and under new direction, CityStep has been able to continue the tradition she began. We will be back next year with another new show, and hope to see you there.

Students, lend us your ears, we'll lend you some money!

Student loans are available from Cambridge Trust Company now and they are the best deal around. If you qualify, these loans are government supported and at very advantageous terms for the student. And the credit and income requirements are very lenient when compared to standard loan requirements. So drop in at any of our offices and ask about our student loan program. You'll probably find it's the easiest part of your academic program.
